

Dear Cousin,

I hope this letter finds you in good spirits. I sit down to ~~write~~ write this email, ~~am~~ hoping to catch up on the recent events in your life. Considering ^{the} fact that your summer break is about to start, you must be feeling quite content and delightful. The decision of ~~whether~~ to how to spend your ^{upcoming} holidays is integral, and equally confusing. I hope to relieve you of your burden and help solve the dilemma.

One of the most renowned ways to spend your summer break is by travelling to different areas and countries. This can prove to be quite beneficial as it allows the person to take a break from the continuous, exhausting studies. Students can relieve their stress by visiting areas filled with mother nature, ^{which} refreshes their minds and uplifts ^{their} mental health. Moreover, touring new places can provide a greater exposure to different cultures and traditions. You get the opportunity to interact with various new individuals, making new friends and countless memorable moments. Interacting with others is not only fun, but also widens the horizon of your thoughts.

In addition to this, travelling on your own, or with your friends, boosts self-confidence and self-dependence. You learn to manage schedules and finances on your own, which has long-term impacts on your practical life. However,

On the other hand, Some people prefer spending their vacations at home, indulging in various activities and volunteer work. This can also have a positive impact on your university life, you by gaining experience and developing integral skills. Working in family business or getting a part-time job can help individuals establish contacts and expand their social circle. They also learn and improve their communication skills, while having an opportunity to spend more time with their families.

Working at a job can also help you earn money, that can be saved or used as you please. As for addition to jobs As well as jobs, students can also partake in various activities around the neighbourhood.

In my opinion, travelling to different places and experiencing new culture is a more effective way to spend your summer break. While staying at home and working at jobs can help you gain experience, travelling allows you to enjoy your life while learning life skills. You can counter prevent yourself from being a
